- Work Conditions and Employment for Women in Slums : A Case Study of Bhuj City, Kutch, Written by – Indranil De, Mukul Kumar & H.S.Shylendra

ABSTRACT

Women residing in slums and slum-like settlements of Bhuj are majorly employed in traditional activities such as bandhani, embroidery, fall beading, etc, and only to a much lesser extent in emerging opportunities, including non-farm casual labour and jobs in the private and public sectors. Women's preference is overwhelmingly tilted towards the former employment opportunities as compared to the latter, due to flexibility of work and possibility of working from home, given certain sociocultural constraints and poor working conditions in other sectors. Moreover, limited access to capital for women's own enterprises ensures that the chances for expansion and formalisation of their small enterprises are minimal.

ABSTRACT

In the recent years, the Indian judiciary has, without any doubt, helped women make significant strides in their long and hard struggle for an equal place in the law. However, it is important to reflect on how these decisions shape the discourse around women's place as equal citizens, and what they may mean for future legal battles.

- Factors Contributing to Income Inequalities among Agricultural Households in India, Written by – Seema Bathla & Anjani Kumar

ABSTRACT

Inequality in agricultural households in 20 major states is estimated and its factors analysed. In most states, farming and livestock contribute over half the total income. Income inequalities, irrespective of farm size, are large, though these have not widened much over time; major sources are non-farm income, land, and farm assets. The relationship between growth in household income and land size is positive; it does not augur well for the government's professed objective of promoting inclusive development. To bridge income gaps, mechanisms need to be developed to ensure the viability of increasingly small and fragmented landholdings.

- Does Menstrual Hygiene Management in Urban Slums need a Different Lens? Challenges Faced by Women and Girls in Jaipur and Delhi, Written by – Vasudha Chakravarthy, Shobhita Rajagopal & Bhavya Joshi

ABSTRACT

For the first time since Independence, India's urban population has registered a higher increase than the rural population. Increasing urban-biased economic activity and job creation are leading to rapid urbanisation, and a greater number of poor people today are living in cities and towns in India. Slums, often the residence of migrants and urban poor, are underserved areas with poor housing, insufficient living space, basic infrastructure and services such as clean drinking water, drainage and electricity, and poor access to toilets and sanitation services. Urban poverty and life in slums significantly compromise the ability of women and girls to effectively manage menstruation.

- Menstrual Hygiene Management During Emergencies : A Study of Challenges Faced by Women and Adolescent Girls Living in Flood-Prone Districts in Assam, By– Mayuri Bhattacharjee

ABSTRACT

Women and adolescent girls in disaster-prone and fragile contexts face many challenges. This study¹ brings out various cultural and logistical issues faced by women and adolescent girls in taking care of their menstrual hygiene needs during floods. Data were collected in the flood-prone state of Assam from village communities in three districts—Sonitpur, Biswanath and Nagaon—through semi-structured interviews, focus group discussions and observations. Although sanitary napkins were distributed in some situations, there seemed to be no strategic plan or prior preparation for disposal despite the fact that floods are an annual occurrence in Assam.

- Sanitation Interventions in India : Gender Myopia and Implications for Gender Equality, Written by – Sujith Koonan

ABSTRACT

In India, sanitation interventions have been, by and large, myopic to the gender dimensions of sanitation and hygiene. As a result, women's sanitation and hygiene needs and vulnerabilities have not received adequate attention. While the legal and policy framework related to sanitation highlights some of the concerns of women, implementation at the local level has almost completely neglected them, raising serious concerns from a gender equality point of view. Using a gender perspective, this article takes a critical look at the existing legal and policy framework in India pertaining to sanitation.

- A Qualitative Gender Analysis of Women Field Guides' Experiences in Outdoor Behavioral Healthcare : A Feminist Social Work Perspective, By – Maggie Q. Karoff and Et.al.,

ABSTRACT

Social work has long supported activity-based group work for young people. One such approach includes outdoor behavioral healthcare (OBH), also known as wilderness therapy, which often employs nonclinical field staff to lead outdoor activities as part of the overall treatment model. Although men and women both serve as field guides, the culture of OBH has historically been male-dominated, at times obscuring the voices and perspectives of female staff in the field. For this reason, a feminist social work lens was employed in order to engage in a qualitative gender analysis of women field guides' experiences in OBH.
